OLD MAN WINTER SENDS MERCURY TO NEW LOW MARK HERE

Temperature Shows 2 Above Zero at 7 o'Clock This Morning

MUCH ICE IN THE RIVER

Children Sledding in Streets Are Danger To Motorists

Bristolians are thawing out today after one of the coldest nights in recent years. In the opinion of many the mercury dropped to the lowest mark it has reached since the winter of 1917.

The mercury reached its lowest mark at seven o'clock this morning when it touched two degrees above zero.

The temperature began to drop at midnight and then it continued to fall until seven o'clock this morning when the lowest was recorded. At midnight the temperature in Bristol, at the greenhouses of Jacob C. Schmidt, where hourly readings are kept, stood at 11 above zero. It was from this time on that the mercury began its nose dive.

Much ice appeared in the river today.

Old Man Winter blew his icy breath across Pennsylvania today sending the mercury far below zero in many points and forcing it to 35 degrees below at Tobyhanna in Monroe County. Cold weather records fell on all sides as winter blasts brought misery and suffering to many. In addition, the weather man was none too comforting with his forecast. He predicted only slightly rising temperatures with snow possibly tonight and Saturday.

Suffering and general hardships joined hands with death as all descended to new levels. Coal bins felt winter's touch and welfare institutions were rushed with demands for food and shelter.

Mount Pocono reported 32 degrees below zero. A 15 year old record fell at Kane when the mercury sank to 23 below. Lewis Run in Franklin County and Pocono Lake in Monroe County reported 22 below. A reading of 20 below was reported from Cherry Valley in eastern Pennsylvania.

Helen Giza, 12, Sharpshooter, was burned to death when she sought the heat of a gas stove. Dalton White, 8, of Marvle, rode to his death on a sled that hit a locomotive. An unidentified man was found in a vacant lot, a victim of exposure in Philadelphia.

Coasting accidents and automobile mishaps bringing serious injury in many cases were numerous. Pennsylvania highways remained open but slippery and hazy in the majority of cases.

The mercury read 6 above at Pittsburgh; at Harrisburg it dropped to 3 above. Philadelphia experienced its coldest weather with 6 above, since January 4, 1927. At Reading, the temperature was 4 above.

INGENUITY RESULTS IN A CHRISTMAS VILLAGE

Mr. and Mrs. H. Freas, Edgely, Use Wire, Tin, Wood, Cardboard, Salt for Such

REQUIRED SKILL, TIME

EDGELEY, Dec. 29.—Ingenuity, patience and skillful hands have created a miniature Christmas village at Edgely, created it from sawdust, tin cans, odds and ends of wire, beads, epsom salts, cheese boxes, spokes of old chairs, pieces of cardboard, numbers cut from magazines, crocheted cotton, bits of tin.

And to make the village more realistic and decidedly home-like, the stores and other places of business, as well as the mail boxes bear the names of Edgelyites.

The display is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Freas, Edgely avenue.

To start at the beginning of this interesting piece of work: Mr. Freas made use of discarded window shades for the basis of the display. The shades were shellacked and then sand applied. Streets are well laid out and lighted, and green grass and trees are well-placed.

The village is composed of several houses, all made by Mr. Freas in his spare time. Some are of "frame" construction and painted, while one house and the church have been "stuccoed" with epsom salt. There is a small waiting room with the traditional benches and the advertisements on the walls. Chimneys of the buildings are fashioned either from tin or wood, the latter having table salt applied to absorb paint and give the appearance of cement.

A railroad with a "steam" locomotive surrounds the village, and this is complete as far as signals, blinkers, tunnel, crossing gate, tower, etc., are concerned. The little black town, formed of a cheese box, has a "pitch" roof, the "pitch" appearance being given by application of sawdust which was later painted black. Ladders which run up the side of the high signals were once odds and ends of wire, while the signal framework is formed of pieces of tin. In the tower machinery operates the signal lights for the trains.

A water tower was once a soup can, but now it glistens in its coat of aluminum paint. Street light poles were made from small spokes of old chairs, and the shades for these lights are of bits of tin.

The railroad has all necessary equipment, even whistle boards made of cardboard, the letter "W" being cut from magazines. The mountain under which the train runs was made by Mr. and Mrs. Freas from stiff wrapping paper, to which black paint was applied, and then snow sifted on.

A small "metal" fence which surrounds the church-yard was brought about by use of wire. Two frosted electric light globes grace either side of the entrance to the church-yard, and these are bulbs which have been "frosted" with water-color.

A barnyard takes up one part of the village, with cattle of all descriptions grazing. A small corn-crib was formerly a piece of cardboard. In the window of the loft of the barn, hay is seen. A windmill is also located on the farm, and for this, tin and crocheted cotton were used.

Many have visited the Freas home to see the result of the handiwork of the couple who spent many hours at the task, and to which display pieces have been added from year to year. They enjoy reading the signs on the stores, bearing names of local people, and reading on the mail boxes by the roadside the names of M. Dick, L. Cook, R. Moon and W. Subers.

A BOY ARRIVES

Mr. and Mrs. Nazzareno Di Cesare, 318 Lincoln avenue, are the proud parents of a boy born Tuesday, and weighing 8½ pounds.

HERE AND THERE THRUOUT BUCKS COUNTY

Needy Will Receive Surplus Products in Near Future

NOW ORGANIZING

Bucks county is being organized at present for the distribution of the "surplus food products" which will be given out under the general relief program, in addition to the customary relief orders.

These products will include butter, eggs, flour and pork taken over by the federal government. It calls for a central form of distribution and responsibility, according to the federal rules.

Wholesalers, who will handle these products, furnishing storage and refrigeration, are required to be responsible for the individual stores distributing them, and this has restricted the handling of the products considerably. Local relief agencies have no choice in the matter, and as a result the distribution has been restricted to chain stores whose central managements have agreed to these demands.

Orders for these products will be given out to families receiving relief orders and to jobless men who have been given employment on the Civil Work projects, the size of the orders being restricted to the extent of food orders, where they are being granted now, or the average of orders formerly given to the jobless when they were on relief.

The orders will be for a definite amount, and within that the persons receiving them will be able to make their purchases.

It has not been announced when the first orders will be given out, but it will not be immediately.

Borough officials and men interested in the affairs of the fire department will be guests at the annual New Year's party to be held Saturday night by Union Fire Company of Morrisville at its fire house. James Groome, of Yardley, president of County Firemen's Association; Fire Marshal William Stackhouse, of Hulmeville; present members of council and the newly-elected councilmen, together with Mayor Stockham, will all be guests. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the company will also attend and these women will furnish the supper.

There will be a fine program arranged which will include speeches by the guests. Fire Chief Cleveland Reed, of Capitol View Company, will also be a guest.

The election of officers was held at

HIBERNIANS REMAIN UNDEFEATED IN LEAGUE

Play Brilliant Defensive Game Against the Third Ward

FINAL SCORE IS 30 TO 19

(By T. M. Juno)

Playing a brilliant defensive game in the second half, the Hibernians remained undefeated in the Bristol Basketball League last night, chalking up their sixth straight win at the expense of the Third Ward A. C. Final score was 30-19.

During the entire 20 minutes of milling in the second part of the battle, the Warders after fighting the league-leaders toe to toe in the first half were held scoreless from the field and only made three points. Two of these fouls came in the third session while the final score came with but a few minutes remaining to be played.

Again the Roe brothers, Joie and Eddie, figured prominently in the Big Green's victory. Between them, the Roe boys netted a total of 25 of the 30 points scored by the winning combination. Joie was chalked up with 14 while the elder Roe was credited with 11.

The Warders lacked the punch that they have possessed all season and in the fray only made four goals from the field. In the first half, the Pikers rallied in the last ten minutes to deadlock the score at the half-time gun. To do this the boys from downtown led by Birchenoff counted ten rallies in the second quarter.

For the losers, Birchenoff was high scorer with seven points while Brown stood out on the defense. Dougherty and Sascavitz played a nice guarding game for the winners.

BABY DERBY PRIZE LIST IS ANNOUNCED

Merchants To Give Gifts to First Born in Year 1934

RACE IS NOW ON

The 1934 Baby Derby is now on.

Interest in the race is becoming keener with each closing minute of the waning year 1933. There remain less than 60 hours to the finish line and the first baby girl or boy who crosses said finish line will be a lucky baby indeed.

Yes—There await the first baby born in this section in the year 1934 many trophies—not in the form of "purses" or loving cups—but practical gifts, those that can be used every day from the time of arrival.

Seven business houses in Bristol are backing the "Derby," and the winner in this unusual race will be a smiling, cooing baby, one who really won't know anything about races or anything else in this world of wonderment for some time to come. But he or she will benefit just the same, even though they won't realize how much this "Baby Derby" will mean to their comfort, and the happiness of their parents.

The first baby born in this vicinity in the year 1934 the seven merchants backing the race will shower with gifts.

The name, address and time of arrival of the winner will appear in the Courier one week from today. The parents of the cherubs who arrive after midnight of December 31, 1933, are asked to send the name, address, doctor's report and birth certificate to the Baby Page Editor, Bristol Courier, not later than five p. m., January 4th. The gifts which will be showered upon the fortunate little one will be: Blanket, gift of Esther Bruner; free wet wash for one week, Bristol Damp and Finish Laundry; $1 credit in savings account, The Bristol Trust Company; bootee outfit, Smith's Model Shop; pair of shoes, Moffo's Shoe Shop; 10 quarts of grade A nursery milk, Keystone Dairy Company; anti-septic baby oil, Straus' Cut Rate Store.

Rev. Seaver M. Holden Dies Suddenly in Connecticut

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 29.—The Rev. Seaver Milton Holden, who for years was priest in charge of the Church of the Incarnation Mission, here, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Dodd, Woodbridge, Conn., Wednesday.

The late rector retired from the Morrisville charge on December 15th. Funeral service will be held this afternoon at 2:30, at Christ Episcopal Church, Ansonia, Conn., with interment in Ansonia Cemetery.

The Rev. Holden had gone to visit his relatives over the holidays and was stricken with a heart attack four days ago. He had been in ill health for some time, and his physician advised him to resign and take a complete rest.

The clergyman went to Morrisville 15 years ago from Bristol where he had served as rector of old St. Paul's Episcopal Church. He had been active in the Morrisville Red Cross and other welfare work, and also took a prominent part in Chamber of Commerce activities.

A graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., in 1882, the Rev. Mr. Holden was one of the founders of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity there. He was valedictorian of his class and member of Phi Beta Kappa. In 1886, he added the Master of Arts degree to his A. B. degree. He was ordained to the priesthood in the same year.

In 1887, the Rev. Mr. Holden became warden of Jarvis Hall, a Denver, Col., preparatory school for boys. He had been active in collecting funds for enlarging the institution.

The Rev. Mr. Holden then began his preaching career, becoming rector of Episcopal churches in Mansfield, Ohio, and Chillicothe, Mo.

He then went to Kansas City where he became dean of St. George's Cathedral for four years. In 1895 he was stationed in Sharon, Pa., and went from there to St. Paul's Church, Bristol.

During his stay in Bristol, the Rev. Mr. Holden was active in war work at the Bristol shipyard. He personally guided 500 foreign-born men and women who were applying for American citizenship. Teaching them how to speak English, the Rev. Mr. Holden also arranged for their transportation to Philadelphia for the examination. A deputy to the General Church Convention, he was examining chaplain in the dioceses of Colorado, Ohio, Western Missouri and Pennsylvania.

SESSIONS OF STATE GRANGE ARE REPORTED

Howard B. Austin Tells Middletown Members of Johnstown Meetings

INSTALLATION PLANNED

LANGHORNE, Dec. 29.—At a meeting of Middletown Grange in the Friends School, here, Wednesday evening, accounts of the recent sessions of the State Grange in Johnstown a few weeks ago were given.

The master of the local grange, Howard B. Austin, was the one reporting. Mr. Austin and Mrs. Austin represented Middletown Grange at the state sessions.

Mr. Austin told that the attendance at the meeting in Johnstown was not as large as usual, but the sessions contained much of interest and value to the farmers. Fred Brenkman, the national representative of the Grange in Washington, gave an interesting talk on national affairs and the national master, L. J. Tabor, spoke at the state sessions.

State Master J. A. Boak expressed the hope of being able to visit all the counties in the State during the ensuing year.

Lecturers of sub-ordinate and Pomona Granges throughout the State had been requested to prepare and send scrap books of news clippings and other publicity in the Granges throughout the past year. These were very nicely arranged and contained much of interest. The scrap book considered the best was sent by a Grange from Warren county and the second best was from a Grange in Tioga county. Lower Bucks Pomona Grange had a scrap book on display.

During the literary hour, Mrs. William P. Newbold read two poems by Edgar A. Guest, one on Christmas and the other which gave the description of a miser hoarding Christmas cards.

Referring not to serve as Ceres, to which position she had been named at the recent election, one of the members was succeeded by Mrs. Alfred Thompson, who will be among the officers to be installed at the next meeting on January 10th. Members of Pineville Grange will be in charge of the installation and the installing officer will be Pomona Master B. Palmer Tomlinson, also a member of Pineville Grange.

Following the singing of several selections appropriate to Christmas, refreshments were served.

EXCHANGEITES FROLIC AT CHRISTMAS PARTY

Delightful Affair Enjoyed In The Travel Club Home

SANTA PAYS A VISIT

Members of Bristol Exchange Club, their wives and guests enjoyed a Christmas party last evening in the Travel Club home, Cedar street.

A delightful dinner was served at seven o'clock which consisted of oyster cocktail, roast turkey and filling, candied sweet potatoes, wax beans, creamed onions, salad, rolls, celery, olives, cranberry sauce, ice cream, small cakes and coffee. Group singing was very much enjoyed during the course of the banquet, under the leadership of Percy G. Ford, during which George J. Irwin and Dr. George T. Fox rendered solos of "Sweet Adeline" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," respectively.

At the close of the dinner the president of the club, David Landreth, welcomed those assembled and asked that the entire gathering stand with bowed heads for a moment's silence in reverence of Vellino V. VanSant, a past president of the club, "whom God, in His infinite goodness, called to eternal rest some few weeks ago, and whose loss is most keenly felt and mourned by each member of the club."

Brief greetings were given to the assemblage by Norman Haac, district governor of the First District of Pennsylvania; J. Linden Tappin, president of the North Philadelphia club; Daniel Leatherman and Milton Hildenbratt, members of the North Philadelphia club; William H. H. Fine, State President of Pennsylvania Affiliated Exchange, and Dr. George T. Fox, who has familiarly been named and was so introduced, as the "Daddy" of the Bristol Exchange Club.

Words of congratulation and best wishes were extended to Paul Forster, the newly appointed Secretary and Treasurer of the club by the retiring officers, James Douglass as secretary, and Russell A. Johnson as treasurer.

A very delightful program of entertainment followed, which included quartet selections by C. Melvin Johnson, first tenor; C. Harry Bunting, second tenor; Percy G. Ford, baritone; Andrew J. MacArthur, basso; vocal solos, Mrs. Russell A. Johnson and Mrs. Charles I. Bowen. Keith Rosser accompanied the musical selections.

Two humorous skits were presented by the members of the club, the first, "Christmas Fireflies," and the second, "The Schoolroom," taking the assemblage back to the time when they were 15 years of age. Doron Green played the part of the school master, with his students having a rehearsal for a Christmas entertainment. William Arensmeyer proved to be the "temperamental" member of the class who rather hysterically refused to "say his piece" and he was removed from the scene by the "helty" member, Roy Fry.

After the arrival of Santa Claus, who presented each with a gift, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

CONSISTENT ADVERTISING

Depositors, who asked one of the country's largest banks why it continued advertising on a large scale after its reputation was assured and its business about as large as it cared to build it, knew little about advertising methods or aims. But the bank officer who answered the queries does know advertising.

This bank isn't spending thousands of dollars a year on advertising merely to evade income taxes or because it has more money than it knows what to do with. It is making a handsome profit on every dollar of that advertising budget.

Recognizing the fact that all banks that have grown and flourished have been aggressive and persistent advertisers, it knows that if it is to continue to grow and flourish it must continue to advertise. Last year's advertising is like water over the dam to this year's newcomers to the advertiser's community.

But banks advertise for more than new patrons. Their advertising increases the satisfaction and pride of their customers in their bank, and sets a high goal of service for their employees to strive for. Institutions offering in their advertising a high standard of service find that their personnel feels a sense of obligation to live up to that standard.

This successful bank has also discovered that adequate and intelligent advertising is as essential in perpetuating a good business reputation as it is in creating such a reputation.

CONVERSATION

It is called a lost art—this comfortable custom of easy talk in good company which deserves the name of conversation. But it was never an art, for there is no technique to it nor will it stand too conscious cultivation. Neither is it lost, but only mislaid in the muddle of too many occupations and distractions.

There is no end of good conversationalists, or there would be no end of opportunities for conversation still existed. Civilization seems to be in some sort of conspiracy against the gentle pastime of leisurely conversation. There are too many preoccupations, hobbies and business demands on one's time to permit of even good table talk. Everybody is in too much of a hurry to finish dessert and be off.

If it were not for business and bridge and golf and fishing and reading and radio and automobiles, a man might now and then find time and place to talk a topic to an approximate finish with a friend and equal for no useful purpose except the pure pleasure of intelligent discussion.

There ought to be a law making conversation compulsory at three meals a day prolonged to not less than 60 minutes each. And there ought to be some way to shut up the few who have been doing all the talking and to compel the many who have done no talking to open up. Good conversation cannot be a one-sided arrangement.

Two-pants suits just increase the difficulty of remembering where that key is.

We haven't yet seen a manufacturer of hair restorer who gave a comb with every bottle.

Being a telephone girl is neither a profession nor a business. It is a calling.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

"Funny! It's priceless. Blair doesn't dream it but the old fool practically dropped a million dollars into my lap today. A battle of ballyhoo!" Haverholt exclaimed. His eyes were bright and shining. His face was flushed with color. He struck his hands together. "The bridge battle of the century. Patricia, and you and I the center of it all! This thing will make us! We'll be publicized from coast to coast. Columns of free publicity movies, magazines, radio, everything. We've got the stuff this time. The gentlemen on one side, the roughies on the other—it's magnificent copy. We will sit down to begin that tournament with all America watching."

In his mind he heard the grinding of movie cameras, the clack of telegraph instruments, the blare of radio. He saw the sales of his books leap skyward; he saw himself a national figure, he saw himself triumphant, acclaimed as the greatest bridge player in the world. He had forgotten the girl. He started as she said quietly.

"Of course if the match goes through it will ruin me."

"What nonsense," he said crossly, irritated at being distracted from this splendid dream.

"It isn't nonsense. You must see that it's not." Her face was as pale as his own. She said: "If you persist in going through with this, how long do you believe I can continue to pose as Patricia Haverholt? How long do you believe it will take Reuben Blair or someone else to learn that I'm not your niece?"

There was a silence in the room. Patricia swallowed with a dry throat. She watched him with frightened eyes.

"Dozens of people know me," she said dully, "know that I'm not Patricia Haverholt. They'd see my pictures, they'd. She buried her face in her hands. Oh, what a fool I am," she whispered.

"I thought of all that, he conceded stiffly, reluctantly angry at this turn in the conversation. "I admit it makes things awkward, awkward but not fatal. Even if it is discovered the heavens won't fall. Bridge players aren't saints; no one expects them to be or really cares. There may be a scandal. What of it? I've lived through scandal before."

"No doubt you have," said the girl bitterly, perceiving that he would never see her side of it, that he was incapable of seeing any side except his own. She said, "Men usually live through scandal. It's the girls who don't."

Haverholt got up, kicking his chair aside.

"I've promised to stick by you," he announced coldly. "I'll swear till I'm black in the face that you are my niece. What more do you expect of me? Do you expect me to give up the chance of a lifetime simply because someone might say that you name is Patricia Warren? If you expect it, you're out of luck."

"I expect nothing from you," said Patricia. "Nothing at all."

They faced each other with actual hatred. Haverholt stalked toward the door. On sudden impulse he turned back to the girl, dropped to the arm of her chair.

"I'm sorry, Patricia," he said, "really I'm sorry. I know you're in a jam. Get out or think that you are."

Clark's lips brushed her cheek. Only for a moment, and then she pulled away.

"Go away," said the girl distinctly. "Please go away. Run but you can't count me out."

"So you think it's all my fault, Patricia?"

"No," she confessed thickly, "I've been good to you, haven't I?"

"In your way."

"You knew my way; you knew that I was selfish and egotistical, and didn't give a darn for what people thought. You knew I wouldn't change, that you couldn't change me, didn't you?"

"Do you think you would be playing fair to walk out on me now?" he asked her calmly. "Do you think it would be fair for you to refuse to play in the match?"

"I guess not," she replied unhappily. She managed the shadow of a smile. "I can hope, though, can't I, that your plan will fall through?"

"You can hope whatever you want," he agreed in sudden relief.

Someone knocked on the door, opened it at Haverholt's response. It was Clark. He looked at the two of them rather oddly and said:

"A gang of newspaper men have just arrived from New York. They want to interview you and Patricia. Oh yes," he added, "they want to take pictures of you both."

"I'll go," said Haverholt quickly. "I'll take care of the newspaper men. You stay here, Patricia."

"They want Patricia too," said Clark.

"They'll have to do without her," Haverholt announced, disappearing through the door. "Even newspaper men can't have everything they want."

He was gone. Clark and the girl were left alone, the girl whose pale, strained face betrayed her utterly. For a moment there was silence.

ATTENTION CAR OWNERS!

The New Automobile Law

Pennsylvania's new Financial Responsibility Act becomes effective January 1, 1934. It makes financial responsibility a legally necessary qualification for the privilege of owning or driving a motor vehicle.

A motorist will be given 15 days in which to satisfy a court judgment against him following an accident in which someone is injured or resulting in property damage in excess of $200. If the motorist fails to satisfy the judgment within the time limits, his owner's or operator's license will be suspended until, first, the judgment has been satisfied and, second, he provides evidence of financial responsibility to take care of possible future judgments.

Financial responsibility must be provided, under penalty of license revocation, if the owner or operator is involved in two or more accidents (within or without the State) in one year (retroactive to January 1, 1933) causing personal injury or property damage totaling $200.

Applicants for 1934 licenses will be required to furnish their accident records for the year 1933.

A false accident record will result in revocation of license for two years, at the end of which time proof of financial responsibility must be furnished before license will be issued.

How To Prove Financial Responsibility

The motorist has a choice of three methods by which he may prove his financial ability to satisfy judgments rendered against him:

1. A cash deposit of $11,000 with the Secretary of Revenue.
2. A Bond for $11,000 issued either by a surety company authorized to do business in Pennsylvania, or by individuals, each owning unencumbered real estate in the required amount.
3. Public Liability insurance with a minimum coverage of $5,000 for injury to one person, and $10,000 for injury to more than one person in a single accident; in addition, Property Damage insurance with coverage of at least $1000 is also required.

This needed legislation says in effect: "No one is to be permitted to drive a car unless he is able to pay for any damage he might cause." Obviously, the easiest and most economical course for every motorist is to carry Public Liability and Property Damage insurance.

PATERSON DEFEATS
ST. ANN'S CAGE FIVE

Taking advantage of the foul tries given it, the Paterson Parchment Paper Company team handed the St. Ann's A. A. five its sixth straight defeat of the season by the tabulation of 42-35.

Fourteen foul goals in nineteen tries represented the Paterson team's margin of victory as the Purple and Gold team matched the winners with fourteen double-deckers each. The losers made seven fouls in fourteen tries.

The "Saints" looked better last night than any time this season. Their passing was well-timed and shots for the basket accurate. Only the fact that the Paper Makers were better marksmen from the fifteen foot mark stopped the A's from a victory.

The points of the wipping aggregation were well-divided among the five players, showing fine team-work. Most of the shooting of field goals was done from beyond the dividing line and were well-aimed shots.

Frank Frankovic, who scored ten field goals in his debut last week was held to a single twin-pointer although he sunk in seven fouls in ten tries.

For the losers, "Pete" Bornice tallied five double-deckers and four fouls for a total of fourteen points, followed by Fandetta and Tullio with eight each.

PLAN "FLYER" AIRPLANE

LONDON — (INS) — A notable stimulus to both commercial and pleasure aviation in Great Britain is expected to result from the development in that country of an unusually low-priced airplane engine, according to a report from Consul Roy W. Baker at Bristol. It is reported that the engine can be sold for slightly less than £40 ($194.66 at par) and that a suitable fuselage should be obtained for about £80 ($389.32 at par). This would make available an airplane at about £120 ($583.98).
